Finding Harvard Business Review Articles from a Citation

To find a Harvard Business Review article from a citation follow these step-by-step instructions.

Sample Citation

Step 1.

- Go to the Bronfman Library homepage at http://www.library.yorku.ca/web/bbl/
- Search Harvard Business Review as “Periodical Title Search”

Step 2.

- On the catalogue results page, select the link labelled October 1922 to Current (Business Source Complete) which appears under the “Online Access” in the record for the Harvard Business Review.
Step 3.

Once on Business Source Complete at this point you can either search or browse for the article needed.

Searching

- Select to search within this publication
On the search screen, the title Harvard Business Review is pre-populated. In the second field input the title of the article in quotes “does management really work” and select “Title” from the dropdown menu to the right of the field and select Search.

The article record is displayed including a link to the PDF version.

Browsing

To browse for an article after inputting the title as in step two, on the search results page look for the list of years on the right side of the screen.

Then Browse for the article by selecting the year the article was published i.e. 2012, then select the relevant month i.e. November, and scroll through the list of articles until you come to the one you are looking for. You may have to page over follow the pagination as indicated on the record.

• In this case the article begins on page 76 as indicated in the citation.

If you are required to supply a link to the article you will have to provide the Permalink.

• To access the permalink for an article on the article record, select the title of the article.
• A full record displays with a set of icons on the right side of the screen. Permalink is one of these icons as illustrated in the screen grab below.
